Distance education at the University of Ottawa

Distance education courses at the University of Ottawa are delivered in one of three ways, generally according to the program of studies. The method of delivery depends on what is available at the delivery site. Not all sites are equipped in the same fashion, and not all courses are offered in every center.

Live, interactive courses delivered via audio or video conferencing – These courses are taught in a specialized classroom usually on campus and are broadcast live to other classrooms in several cities and towns in Ontario. Students can interact in real time with the professor: cameras and microphones transmit sound and pictures between the various classrooms. The professor uses an electronic whiteboard linked through the Internet to the other classrooms to present lecture material. These courses are offered only in those sites equipped to receive them. This varies according to the program of studies and the demand in a particular area.

Our distance-education centers are located in Cornwall, Hawkesbury, Pembroke, Toronto and Windsor.

Audio conference courses with a Web component – Some courses are delivered via live audio conference, with support material available online. This type of delivery allows more students to take the courses, which can even be taken from home. The students can listen and talk to the professor in real time. They must have access to a computer with Internet, as well as basic computer skills and a telephone line separate from their Internet connection. This course delivery method is used by the Faculty of Health Sciences, the Faculty of Graduate and Postdoctoral Studies and the Faculty of Education.

Online (Internet-based) courses – These courses are offered completely online. Students must have basic computer skills and, of course, access to both a computer and the Internet. For some courses, the students may have to travel to the campus to take part in course-related activities. This type of course delivery is used by the Faculty of Health Sciences, the School of Graduate Studies and the Faculty of Education. All these courses have some form of Web component that can be found on the Virtual Campus at the University of Ottawa.

Virtual Campus

<http://maestro.uottawa.ca>

The Virtual Campus is the one-stop “sign-in” portal allowing the University community to access online course websites on Blackboard Learn, as well as other e-learning resources. All members of the University community can access the Virtual Campus using their official University ID and password. These are also used to access the uoZone service.

Blackboard Learn allows students to get a personalized class list of the websites of their courses with online components and can navigate seamlessly between the Virtual Campus and the uoZone service. In addition to the course websites, links to all aspects of mediated learning are offered on the Virtual Campus: copyright information, library databases and resources, an FAQ section, and more.

The Virtual Campus is also accessible from the Teaching and Learning Support Service web site: www.tlss.uottawa.ca. You can get technical help as well as help with your account by filling out a computer help form at the Computing Help Centre online at www.ccs.uOttawa.ca/cybersos.

Sessional dates

Beginning and end dates for courses vary from one program to another. Please refer to your faculty or program, or view the complete list of sessional dates under Dates and deadlines online at www.registrar.uOttawa.ca.

Registration

Registration is mandatory for all students attending courses or related activities at the University. No credit will be granted and no grade recorded for any course or activity for which the student is not properly registered. Retroactive registration and retroactive changes in registration cannot be accepted. The registration deadlines in the schedule of important dates and deadlines at www.registrar.uOttawa.ca must be adhered to.

Registration procedure – Undergraduate

1. Online registration with Rabaska®

The University encourages you to use online registration for course selections and course modifications. Online registration is available for most direct-entry faculties. Please note that no other approval is necessary when you register online and receive a confirmation number. You can access Rabaska® via UoZone at www.uoZone.uOttawa.ca.

2. Registration in person or by mail

Course selection approval must be obtained from an academic adviser at the faculty or school in which you have been admitted (Note: Special students must go to InfoService to complete their registration.) before the registration deadline published in the list of important dates and deadlines. Otherwise, late registration fees will be applied.

Regular students must obtain course selection approval by bringing or mailing their completed and signed registration form to the secretariat of the faculty or school no later than the published deadline.

Special students must obtain course selection approval by mailing in their completed and signed registration form, or by leaving it at the secretariat of the faculty or school, usually in the two weeks before classes begin.

Please note: As soon as your course selection at the University of Ottawa has been approved by the faculty or school, you are considered registered. You then automatically have an account payable to the University until fees are paid in full, or until you inform the faculty in writing that you are dropping your course or cancelling your registration by completing and signing the Modification/Cancellation of Registration form and by having it approved by the faculty before the deadline posted in the list of important dates and deadlines.

Off-campus registration

Registration forms are available on the off-campus sites or online at www.registrar.uOttawa.ca.

Hawkesbury

Courses take place at La Cité collégiale, 570 Kitchener Street, Hawkesbury. Classrooms are assigned at the beginning of the session. For library services, contact the Hawkesbury Public Library, 550 Higginson St., Hawkesbury. For more information, contact the liaison officer at 613-632-1657.

Pembroke

Courses take place at Algonquin College, 1 College Way, Pembroke. Classrooms are assigned at the beginning of the session. For library services, contact the Algonquin College Library, 1 College Way, Pembroke. For more information, call 613 735-5181.

Online registration is also available. You can access Rabaska® through uoZone at www.uoZone.uOttawa.ca.

Special students

Access to courses as a special student is limited. Consult the Web page for special students to learn more. Special students are not candidates for a degree and are not formally admitted to the University. They must, however, report to InfoService, complete a registration form and obtain approval. Special students must pay their fees by the deadline in person, by mail or at most Canadian financial institutions.

Because of enrollment restrictions, the University reserves the right to limit special-student registrations.

Changes to registration

Changes to programs of studies and to course selections may be made only up to the closing date appearing in the important dates and deadlines. Students wishing to change their course selection can do so by using the Add/Drop function in Rabaska® or by submitting the signed Modification/Cancellation of Registration form to the faculty, department or school.

Undergraduate student categories

Regular

Regular students are admitted to and registered in a program of studies leading to a degree, diploma or certificate from the University of Ottawa. They are subject to the academic regulations published in the calendar of the faculty or school that offers the program in which they are enrolled.

Special students

Special students are allowed by the University to register for undergraduate courses for credit or as auditors without seeking a degree, diploma or certificate from the University. Special students are governed by regulations and conditions published on the back of the Special Student Registration form.

Auditors

Auditors register for a course as either “regular” or “special” students, but do not wish to complete assignments, write exams or receive credits.

Registration procedure – Graduate studies

As a general rule, all graduate students must register in person, but students taking courses at off-campus locations may register by mail. Students working part time on a thesis or major paper away from Ottawa may also be permitted to register by mail, provided they apply in writing to the Faculty of Graduate and Postdoctoral Studies, and provided there is evidence they are maintaining adequate contact with their supervisor.

Classification of graduate students

Graduate students declare their classification when completing their registration forms. The classification cannot be changed after the deadline published online in the list of important dates and deadlines. For details, please consult the calendar of the Faculty of Graduate and Postdoctoral Studies.

Student card

The University of Ottawa’s photo ID card is mandatory. You’ll need it to borrow books from the University’s libraries, to write your exams and obtain other services. Your student card enables you to borrow directly from Ontario university libraries. You must have completed your registration to obtain an ID card. Make sure to ask for it as soon as your course selection is approved.

Cards are automatically renewed with each subsequent registration. You must keep your card for the duration of your studies at the University of Ottawa. You can get your picture taken at any of the following off-campus sites (for more information, contact the liaison officer):
